Dartmoor to the coast near Holbeton; a journey of some 24km. Keep an eye out for dippers and grey wagtails down along the river and buzzards and ravens further up the valley. Some splendid redwood trees on opposite side of the river in Erme Wood.

This pleasant woodland route follows the river Erme upstream from just below the railway viaduct passing a series of small waterfalls and pools. After 1km there is an information board and handy picnic area overlooking the river.

The River Erme begins its life at Erme Head (in the heart of the southern moor) and flows in a generally southerly direction past some of the best-preserved archaeological remains on
